

How to build the perfect woman

PERFECTION IS RIGHT IN FRONT OF YOU, IF YOU KNOW HOW TO PUT THE PIECES TOGETHER. INTRODUCING MISS JESSICA SALMA SIMPSON

BY PAIGE WISER

We have the technology to build the perfect woman. According to Dr. Greg Wiener, who specializes in cosmetic and reconstructive plastic surgery on Chicago's Northwest Side, women request the same celebrity-inspired body parts, over and over and over. Put them all together, and what do you get? Wiener calls her Miss Jessica Salma Simpson.

One thing's for sure: Heads would turn when she walked in the room. "This 'perfect woman' would certainly be more exaggerated physically than the average woman," Wiener says.

The result might be too much, he cautions. "Beautiful women come in all shapes and sizes," Wiener says. "I receive requests from women seeking to decrease their breast size and their rear ends. Beauty is in the eye of the beholder."

Among the celebrity body parts his clients have requested:

Nose: Ashlee Simpson

"After slimming down the bridge of her nose and reshaping the tip, Ashlee's new nose has completely changed her face," Wiener says. "It is definitely an improvement, and it is also very surprising how much she and Jessica look alike now. Her new nose doesn't distract from her face as it did before and it gives her an overall more feminine, delicate look. When people saw what a difference it made to her overall appearance, they used it as a model when selecting their own 'perfect nose.'"

Lips: Jessica Simpson

"Jessica has very full lips naturally, although at one point she did seek to make them larger with Restalyne," says Wiener. "She is known for her talents as a singer, so this has drawn a focus to her mouth – and with lips like that it is not surprising I get as many requests as I do."

Breasts: Salma Hayek

"Salma is one of the most voluptuous women in Hollywood, and she flaunts her curves with class and grace," says Wiener. "She exudes the busty hourglass shape that many women hope to achieve. Her breasts are at least a D cup – and many patients looking to capture larger curves have used hers as a model."

Derriere: Jennifer Lopez

"J. Lo has single-handedly made America pay attention to shapely rear ends," says the doctor. "With all of the positive attention she has received from the media and public, many women look to her as the gold standard for glutes. Ultimately, her rear end commands attention because of its shape and women request her back-side looking for the same results."
